For a teetotal family, to whom cleanliness and punctuality are no objects, who use no stoneware or other breakable dishes, and who can view with Christian charity the loose ideas upon the subject of property of an untaught heathen brother, I can sunscientiously say that he is admirably adapted. It is purely out of personal regard for him that I am compelled to dispense with his services, for my substance has so diminished since he came into the household that I grieve to see his great acquisitive talents wasted upon such a barren field. I shall be glad to hear that the earth contains another fool so confiding as to take him into service and relieve a white man of his burden. I have endeavored in this to comply both with his request and the truth.-Exchange

Unity of the Universe.

According to the Spencerian view, the universe is a complex unity. which, when reduced to its ultimate analysis, is seen to be one fact-the redistribution of matter and motionall phenomena being complex aspects of that one fact. Under the name of evolution Spencerianism undertook to show that the universe, from star to soul, has passed, by a process of development, from the simple to the complex through successive integratiens and differentiations. For convenience phenomena are divided into sections-astronomy, geology, biology, psychology, and sociology-but the process is one, and the law of the process is one. Evolution is one in principle and fact.-Hector Macpherson, in "Spencerianism Up to Date," in London T. P.'s Weekly.

Souvenir of Florida.

A young woman who recently returned from a trip to Florida brought with her as a souvenir a small cocoanut shell on which a human face had been roughly carved with a few strokes of a knife. This carving was said to have been the work of a Seminole Indian, and on this representation the young, woman had bought the shell; but she was beset later by some doubts as to the authenticity of the claim. She therefore asked a well-known collector of Indian rios if he thought the carving really had been made by a Seminole Indian. He examined carefully the faintly-outfined face and handed the shell back to her with the verdict: "Very likely it was. My only reason for questioning it would be that I am not sure a Seminole would do that much work."

A Squirrel Barometer.

A merchant in a western city has a queer barometer. It is a domesticated fox squirrel. He keeps the little pet in a large paint barrel, all inclosed with the exception of a small round hole in one end. Inside the barrel is a good supply of straw, old paper and leaves. During a run of weather of any kind, hot, cold, wet or dry, the little animal is in and out of house, keeping an open door.

But should there be a change coming, say 10 or 12 hours off, the squirrel plugs up his hole with the matter from his bed and keeps it closed until the change comes. It is claimed the squirrel never makes a mistake, and that he gives no false alarms to his passed with a whoop.-Chicago Rec-
